Women of Brukman

5:30-8:00pm at the Latino Cultural Center (B2)
803 S. Morgan St. Chicago, IL

In 2001, in the midst of the Argentinian monetary crisis, workers of the Brukman men's clothing manufacturing plant in Buenos Aires, occupied the factory deserted by its owners and continued the production on a self-management model. The film tells the story of their successful struggle for the expropriation of the factory. The film accompanies 5 years of cooperative management. It sheds light on their courage, their struggle for justice and democracy without ignoring the political divisions that emerged with the passing years.

This is one of four films in the series. For any questions on Direct Action: A Feminist Film Series, please contact Dr. Sekile Nzinga-Johnson at sekile3@uic.edu.
